Which costume is your favourite, and why?

1, the fluff and shoulder holster looks cool.

3 is my favourite because it is the most realistic for the game play and offers the most protection.

4 - just looks the most natural to fit (also matches his barbarian body type & vibe)

1 it's a nice balance between the full armor and none it's still intricate enough to be appealing but also looks appropriate for the setting in the game

two or three because the character looks suitable in protective gear

1, doesn't stand out too much, a but revealing (attractive) but not too much

1 because it's the box art, GOW ragnarok and the 2018 game have really silly rpg mechanics, I just wanted to look like the base guy Costume 1; it looks realistic, looks good and serves practicality. The natural materials fit the overall look of the character the best, in my opinion. He's not fully covered, but that only adds more on the "rough" aesthetic.

1 because I just think it looks the coolest the armors there just enough

I like 2 because it's appealing and I love the color and design!

3, its a bit flashy and looks like its made out of flint or some kind of armoured creature

1, i like the asymmetric design and how intimidating he looks

1 feels authentic

3 (it looks realistic and protected, plus the orange color visually sets the armor apart)

Outfit 1 makes the character figure more balanced and interesting from the design viewpoint

2 looks more padded and ready for combat

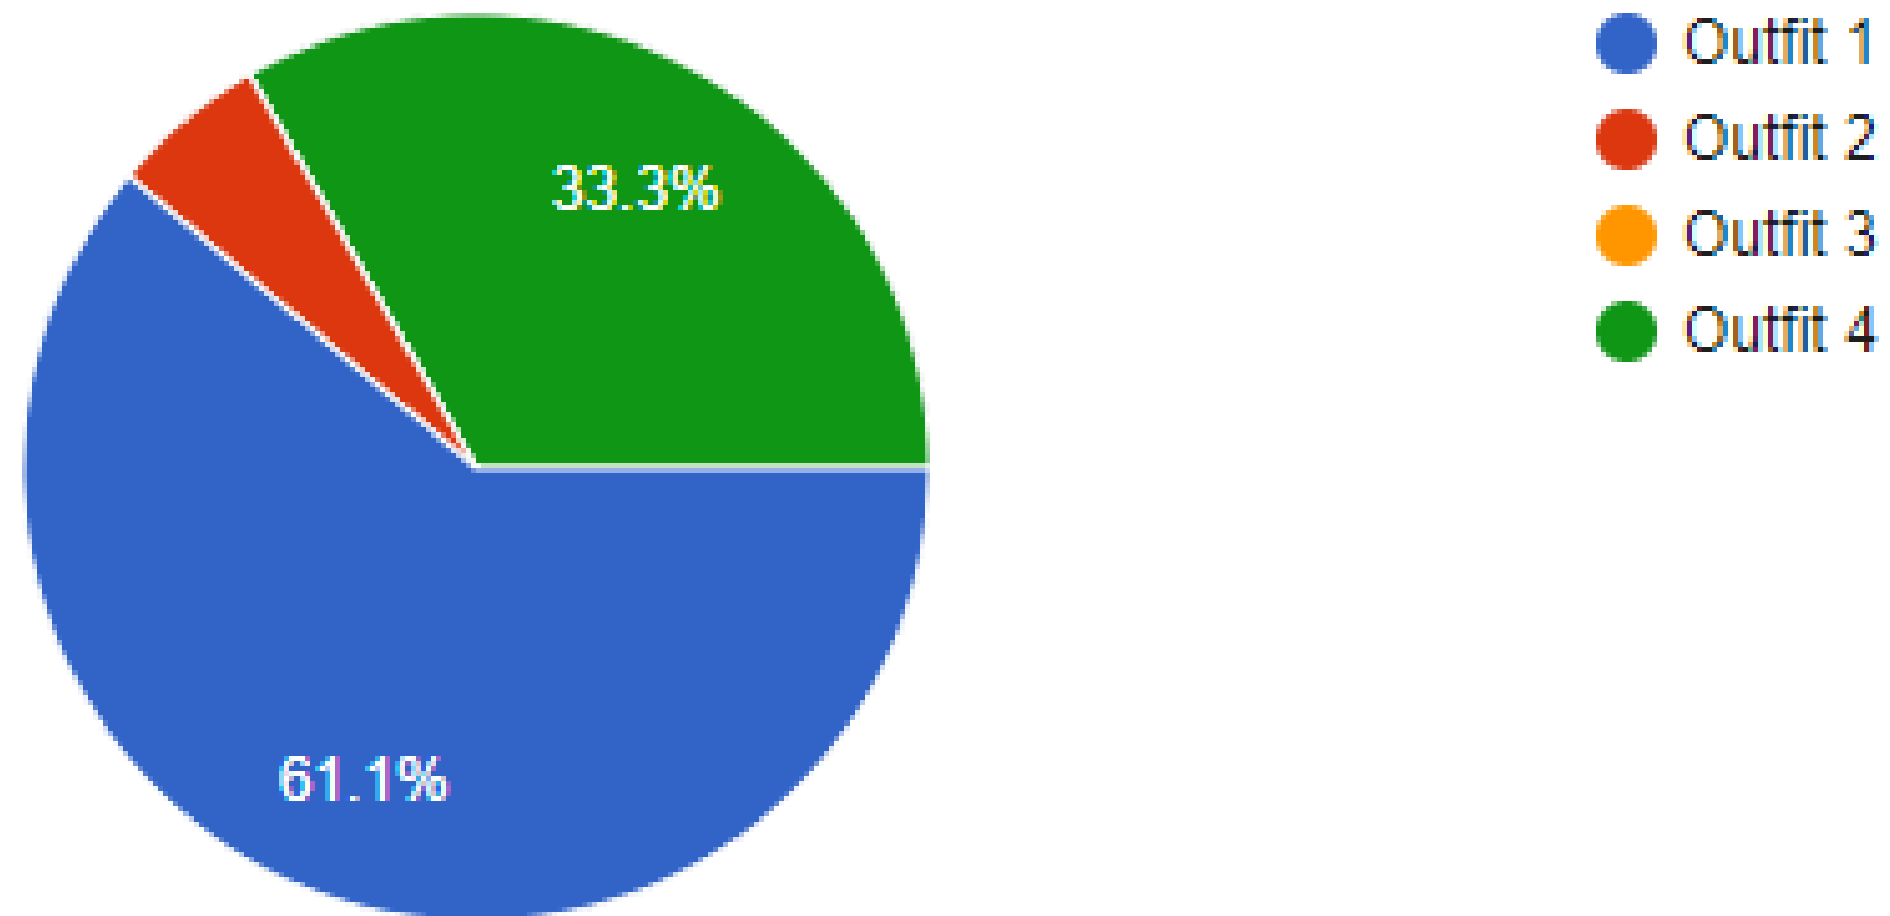

1 outfit goes well with the design of the charecter

4, looks most fun

1, it is a mix of femme fatale spy without being 1000% of the male gaze and having practical elements (no open back with straps, a turtle neck for skin coverage- not a boob window etc.)

4 because it is the most realistic and suits the character the most. it isn't too revealing or sexualised either

3 - I really like it as a style, but assume it wouldn't fair well in the game's specific context (based on images used) - gives a femme fatale vibe

3 I enjoy the other color through in and it doesn't feel to unnecessarily "sexy" it is still impractical outfit one because at least she can potentially move around easier than the other ones where she had a dress on

4, looks still relatively practical and very attractive

1 because it feels the most protective

I personally like the 4th one the most. It definitely is more fanservice-y than the first one, but the not

I personally like the 4th one the most. It definitely is more fanservice-y than the first one, but the not covered space helps to make it more put together in a way. An alternative to the cleavage showing could be some other design elements that don't unnecessarily sexualize the woman, but help practically and visually.

3 I like the design and colors of the outfit

I love 3 because it's got character and it's practical

3, its the most unique and attractive design in my opinion.

there all the same to me, they look too slimier

1 they look like they could fight in it

1 (seems most fitting for the situation)

I like outfit 1 because it looks the most practical among others, however, it looks a bit plain. Also, I like outfit 3 but I don't quite like how open character's back is, as it looks like a vulnerable place

4 looks a bit more usable in the situation while still having some nice costumisation

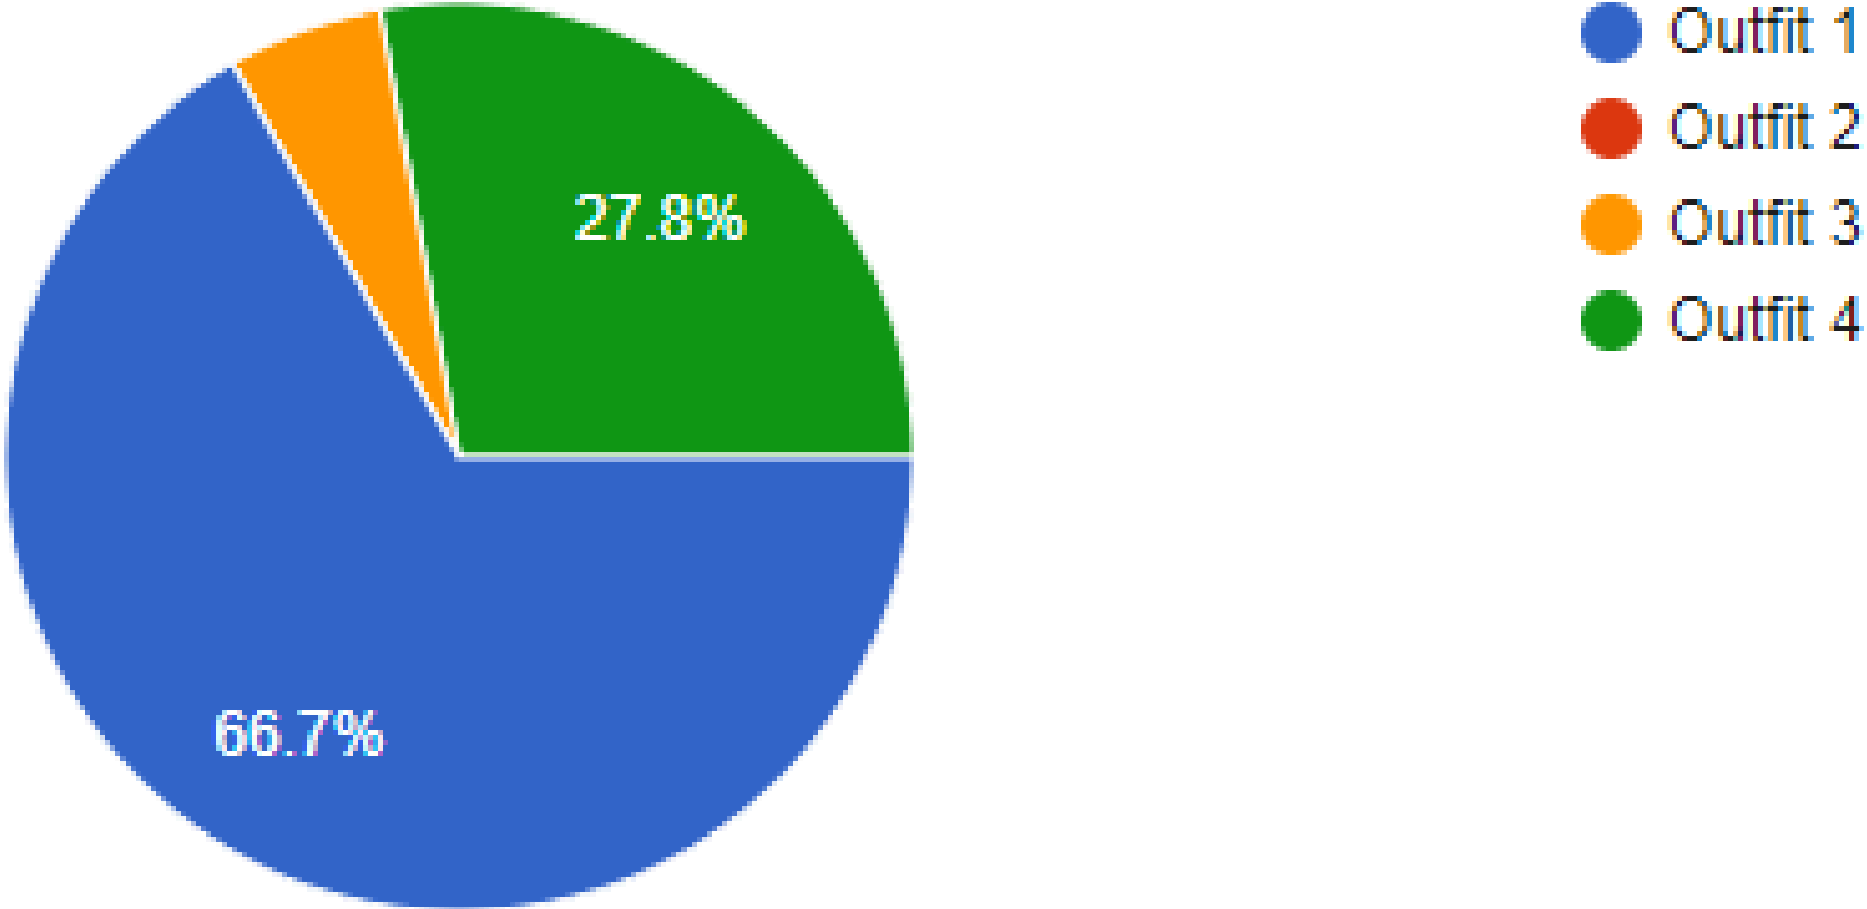

3 like the design on the front

1, seems most comfortable

2, as the colour pallet is the nicest and it looks most realistic.

1 because its the most protective

1 - he just looks really cool - I like the outfit, and he seems well put together and prepared

1 or 3 I enjoy the more tactical look of 1 because it does fit the setting making him look more professional but doesn't feel like johnny cage and the 3 because it's a nice mix of his character with out going full shirtless dude outfit one looks the most prepared but without knowing the game context I can't say for sure

2 for reasons above, also looks practical for fighting

2 because of the red shades

Even tho I am not sure about the character's personality, I overal like the 3rd one the best. The outfit screams stylish and funny, very confident but also a prankster. The character knows they are the best and

The character knows they are the best and want to show it off. The abs showing come as flexing but it's much more subtle than the 4th one.

1 the other ones are a little too flashy

3, again, most unique and flashy.

2, i like his trowsers

2 it meets my expectations of the original game

4 (seems most appropriate for a fight)

I like outfits 1 and 2, as both of them demonstrate the strength of the character but don't make him look too exposed which might be uncomfortable for some players

1 he looks a bit more prepared and i really like the layering

3 because she isn't half naked for the male gaze.

3 - its the most suitable outfit for the character regarding the gameplay.

3 - seems most respectful to the setting and suits the character really well

1 it's the only one that doesn't feel overly showing it still feels on a more "feminine" side with the longer hair and smaller frame outfit three because she isn't being sexualised and is actually wearing a costume appropriate for her role

3, tactical, realistic

3 because she looks the most tactical and prepared to deal with whatever comes her way

The 3rd for sure. She seems super professional and powerful, but even tho she's not showing any skin, it makes it even more attractive in a way. She seems very empowered and confident. Her outfit seems very practical considering the space she's in a makes it much more realistic.

3 the other ones don't look like they fit the setting at all

2 would be my choice. 3 is a bit too cumbersome looking even though its realistic, would make the character look too generic for my taste. 1 is too far the other end.

i dont think any look that great

3 she looks like she is going into combat

3 (character is most prepared for the situation and thus the outfit is most realistic)

Outfit 3 as it looks the most practical and doesn't objectify the character

3 fits the setting a lot more and love the layering

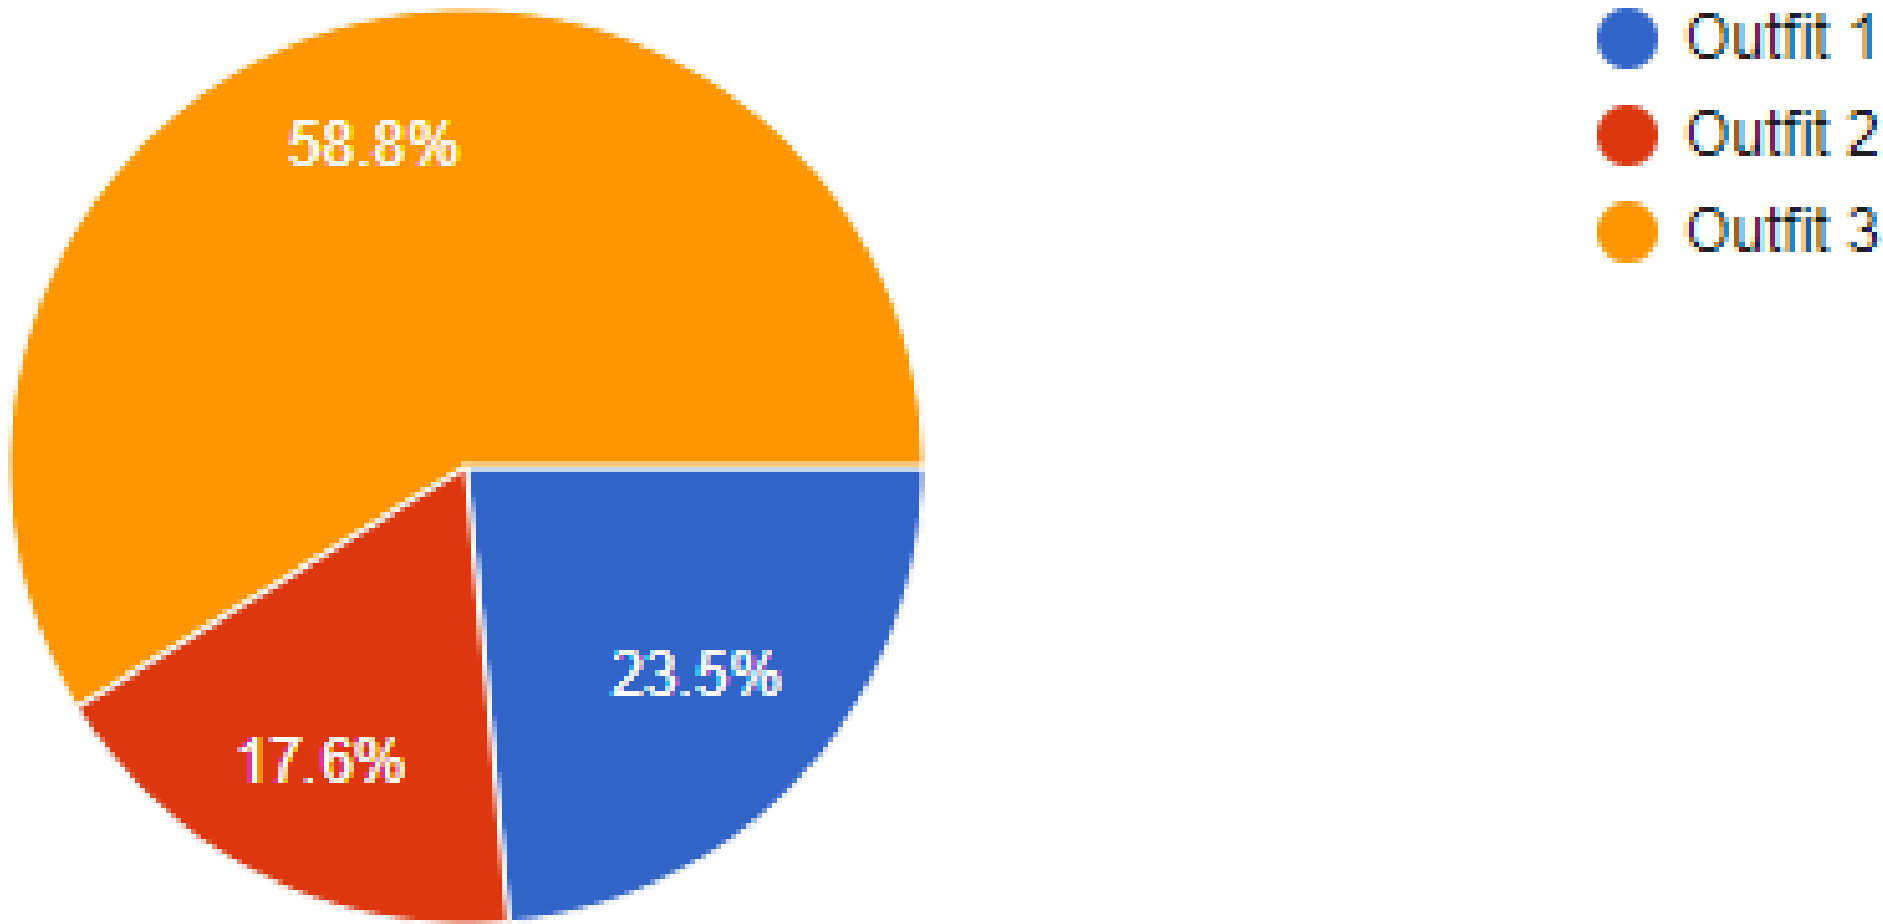

3 not weird

3, least ridiculous
